

SkLO

The founders of SkLO, Pavel Hanousek, Karen Gilbert, and Paul Pavlak discovered each other living in the same small town in Northern California in 2009. Karen Gilbert and Paul Pavlak (an artist and architect, respectively) met Hanousek, a native Czech with years of experience working with the Czech glassblowing tradition. The three decided to join together to pursue a new vision of hand blown Bohemian crystal: an American studio that brings a modern aesthetic designed and guided by Gilbert and Pavlak, to a historic craft tradition.

We work exclusively with glassmasters in the Czech Republic, and as designers we seek to express what is unique and specific to the Czech hand blown crystal tradition. Our design philosophy at SkLO is rooted in materiality and process. We believe in revealing the underlying nature of the materials and the way things are made, resulting in details that make each piece unique. We strive for subtlety, restraint, and beauty.
